Superficial deposits

Published 2012

Building stone quarries (including historical)

Cashel (Lst)

(meta-dolerites and meta-gabbros) suitable for high specification aggregate

Local Government District

Igneous/meta-igneous rocks

Copyright

dolerite dykes which cut across the western part of Fermanagh. Currently only Doonan Quarry extracts this type of material in dolomites form bedded deposits which are generally easy to work. These properties mean that they are commonly worked for

The map should not be used to determine individual planning applications or in taking other decisions on the acquisition or

SUPERFICIAL SAND AND GRAVEL

of thick superficial deposits underlain by Carboniferous-age rocks, including conglomerates containing abundant basement

These deposits are the products of deposition by glacial melt waters, and are typically complex, occurring as sheet- or delta-

![Image]